

Nina enjoying the sand

Tent and Gazebo pitched

Enjoying the view at Kokerboomkloof.

Backside of the koppie with the “Toon” and Campsite 1

We bathed Nina and put her in bed at 18:00 each night. This means that I missed most of the sunsets. I had to improvise a bit and took some photos at night. The first photo I took after dark with the last bit of sunlight giving colour to the picture. I exposed the picture for 1 minute. The second picture is a bit later with only moonlight for lighting. The fire at campsite 2 can be seen against the rock. This picture was exposed for 3 minutes. The movement of the earth can be seen in the stars that are blurred.

Sunset after dark

Moonlit camp

Day 5, 29 April 2015

Kokerboomkloof and surroundings, 10km, 2h

Today we have a bit of an off day. We slept late, till 7:30. Due to the fact that it is so far west in South Africa the sun only rises at this time. 7:00 the stars is still shining. Because this is the only non-travel day on our trip we decided to make a nice breakfast. I bought a Voetspore cook book a while back and did some of these recipes on this trip. We made bobotie the previous evening and for this morning we made a Frittata.

Breakfast

Nina and I also took a bit if a stroll while the sun was rising.

Morning stroll

Most of the other campers left today and by 11:00 we had the whole of campsite 3 to ourselves. We had a nice bath with water that we had to heat on the gas stove and a bucket we brought along for this. We had water in the taps at all the campsites and flushing toilets that were clean and in working order. The facilities were very clean and could be used without any problems. I also had the water on the roof that we could use for this. We had 20℔ off drinking water with us too.

After cleaning and feeling a bit fresher we had a drive to the lookout points. This was actually more so that Nina can sleep in the air-conditioned car. It was getting hot now and the tent was too hot to sleep in.

Lookout over Springbokvlakte.

Lookout number 2